refuse to marry him she was told by the Ripper's threat to take her to the police. Miss Wlaszko told him that she had been annoyed by Jorunski's high intentions and threats for a year. "When I left my native home, eight years ago," said the young woman, "I promised my mother to return when I had earned $300, and that I would marry no man until then. Since I have been in this country I have earned my money as a domestic and a dressmaker. I have a few dollars, but would not marry him on account of the promise made to my mother, and when I returned home I would tell her all about it and she would be pleased. Justice Goetting held Jorunski for trial.

GRIEF HASTENED HER DEATH

A sad case was brought to light yesterday in the Eastern district by the sale of the few household articles of a woman named Na Wu (grand-) which were told to defray several small debts. Meenan is thirty years old, and was employed as a foreman by T. & A. Walsh, the contractors now engaged in building a new dry dock at the wharf. Meenan disappeared, taking with him his three small children, and since his flight his wife gave birth to a bright-eyed boy, and died an hour later. The couple were married five years ago, but both having a violent temper, quarrels between them had been keen from the first. Two days before his disappearance Meenan, it is alleged, brutally beat his wife. On the day he left home he told his wife to dress the children, as he wanted to go to work, and she has not seen them since. And since then nothing has been seen of them. The children are Mary, six years old, John, two years old, and Sarah, one year old. On Thursday last Mrs. Meenan was taken ill, and died an hour later. During her illness she was cared for by her mother, Mrs. John Meenan, who is anxious to find the missing husband, so as to prevent the body of the woman from being buried in Potter's field, and to have her husband's remains exhumed, undertaken and buried. Mrs. Meenan, a neighbor, is now suffering from a severe attack of grief, and death is believed to have been brought on by her missing children.

BOYS CONVICTED OF PETIT LARCENY.
Thomas Parlsen, twelve years old, of No. 42 Graham-ave., William Travis, eleven years old, of No. 52 Roebeling-st., and Louis Quint, thirteen years old, of No. 36 Graham-ave., were prisoners yesterday in the Lee Avenue Police Court, charged with petit larceny. The boys were charged with stealing cigarettes. Young Quint was arrested a few days ago, while Parlsen and Travis were taken from a small store at No. 229 Throop-ave. after robbing the place of several packages of cigarettes. Stigler witnessed the theft, and caught the boy after a chase of several blocks. He is said to be a member of a gang of youthful thieves. When Justice Goetting committed him to the House of Refuge, Young Parlsen and Travis were charged by George Schaeffer, of No. 338 Wythe-ave., with stealing a box of cigarettes from his store on Saturday last. They admitted the theft, but as it was the first offence, and they pleaded so hard to be given a chance to reform, Justice Goetting poloited them pending an investigation as to their character by Agent Meyer, of the Children's Society.

Justice Lemon, in the Ewen Street Police Court yesterday, had a number of youthful offenders before him. They were Joseph Diabel, fifteen years of age, Daniel Sawyer, fourteen years old, and David Martin, thirteen years old. Young Diabel was arrested on Sunday morning by Policeman No. 104, on a charge of being a vagrant and was sent to jail for twenty-nine days. When the sentence was imposed the boy thanked the magistrate. "I will soon have a place to sleep," he said, as he was led to the pen. The boys Devlin and Martin were accused by Samuel A. Lawlor, of the St. George's Hotel, of being thieves. Of No. 82 Manhattan-ave. store keepers, with having stolen several small articles on Saturday night. Both were sent to the House of Refuge.

SORRY HE MARRIED AGAIN.

THEY MAN ALREADY HAD ONE WIFE, AND HE SOON REPEATED

For several years Charles Foley has kept a saloon in one of the lower wards. When he was married he was told that he had to get a first-class license, and made preparations to continue business. After a time, however, he found that trade was gradually drifting away from him, and not long ago he went to the office of the Excise Department, returned his license and received the legal rebate. He lived with his wife over the store, but soon after he had closed up his place he told her he had something important to tell her.

"I have done something," he said, "that I am sorry for. One word from you will save me from State Prison."

and she made inquiries among his friends, and soon learned, she alleges, that the cause of his sudden departure was that he had been married a few days before to Miss Catherine Kenny, a young girl living in the Second Ward. Mrs. Foley thereupon procured a warrant for her husband's arrest, and Detective Bagnarello, of the District-Attorney's office, traced Foley to Philadelphia. The man, finding that the police were on his trail, returned to the man testified that he had nothing to say. Foley replied that he had not, and the Judge thereupon held him in $1000 bail, to await the action of the Grand Jury. Mrs. S. 2, who was in court, said she proposed to see that he did not escape punishment, as they had been keeping company for a long time, and she had never known that he was a married man.

THE ROMANTIC MARRIAGE OF A PRETTY RA1 RIDGE GIRL.

The saying that the course of true love never runs smooth, was entirely disproved by the story of the marriage of Miss Hince and Mr. Hince.

of Gretchen Sandvoss, a pretty sixteen-year-old girl, who disappeared from the home of her parents at Stewart-ave. and Seventy-third-st., Bay Ridge last Friday afternoon, and on Sunday was quietly married to Richard Hince, who had formerly been employed by her father. The parties are well known in German circles at Bay Ridge and Fort Hamilton. Mr. Sandvoss is a charter member of the Teutonia Singing Society of Fort Hamilton and is also prominent among the Odd Fellows and

In local German society, Gretchen, the missing daughter, is a vivacious and striking-looking young woman, and was always active in the fairs, dances, concerts, Sunday-school picnics and other enter- tainments of the place. She was popular, had hosts of friends, and her romantic marriage had set busy tongues wagging. Last Friday afternoon Miss Gretchen was left in charge of the house by her parents, who went away to spend the afternoon. When they returned in the evening, the laughter was missing and the mood was somber. The letter, mailed from Wilmington, Del., which informed them that she was married and had sailed for Germany on the membership card of the German League, was stamped with his head knowing ly, and at once recalled a good-looking German, Richard Hince, whom he had employed for a year as a traveling salesman. Hince lived in Wilmington and, accompanied by a neighbor, he made a trip to that place, where he met a lone daughter, the happy son-in-law and the bride, she promised to return home long enough to visit her
